Dear IACCP Attendees,

Welcome to the 23rd International Congress of the International Association for Cross-Cultural Psychology! The Nagoya organizers have put together an intellectually exciting Congress, together with extremely thoughtful logistical arrangements. Over a thousand participants are expected; and this is a record for our organization! Special thanks to Masaki Yuki, Scientific Committee Chair; and Minoru Karasawa, Organizing Committee Chair, as well as to their respective committees, for the outreach, organization, and hard work that made this wonderful accomplishment possible.

The record attendance also reflects two important developments in our field. First, it shows how, in a globalized world with ever greater intercultural contact, the role of culture in human psychology is gaining increasing scientific appreciation. Second, it reflects the special importance of researchers from Japan - and East Asia more generally - in the theoretical and empirical maturation of our scientific field. Researchers from this part of the world have made – and continue to make – key contributions to understanding the manifold relations between culture and human psychology.

During the Congress, I hope that we will all learn from and be inspired by the scientific program; develop relations with new and old colleagues; expand and reinforce cross-cultural collaborations; enjoy the social and cultural program; and soak in the environment of Nagoya and Japan.

Best wishes,

Patricia Greenfield (University of California, Los Angeles)
President, International Association for Cross-Cultural Psychology

Presidential Address: Social Change, Cultural Evolution, and Human Development: United States, China, and Japan

Using my theory of social change and human development as a framework, I explore sociodemographic and culture level change in the United States, China, and Japan and then look for coordinated changes on the level of learning environments and human development. In all three countries, as urbanization, wealth, and/or education expand, so do expressions of individualism on all three levels: cultural values, learning environment, and human development. However, given that China and Japan have seen such rapid social change, they also show visible signs of the negotiation between historical collectivism and emerging individualism.
On the Dualism of Honoring Traditions and Creating the Future

The first written law in Japanese history is said to date back to the beginning of the 7th Century when the so-called Seventeen-Article Constitution was adopted. Its first article read, "Wa (peaceful harmony) is to be valued." Some attribute the purported pacifist tendency among Japanese to this commandment. One adjectival form of wa is nagoyaka, which is claimed to be one of the possible origins for the name of Nagoya. As an empiricist, I can easily dismiss these mythical anecdotes as unfalsifiable. Neither the trait attribution concerning the national character nor the causal attribution of a cultural tendency to an ancient text would survive rigorous scrutiny of critical thinking. There are scores of alternative explanations on where the name Nagoya comes from. Nevertheless, I cannot help appreciating the coincidence that we are hosting the 23rd IACCP International Congress under the present theme in this city, allegedly a place of peaceful harmony.

Different cultures have their respective history of endeavors toward achieving a harmonious society. Many of those traditional approaches, however, are facing serious challenges from the volatile political, economic, and cultural situations of today’s world, and are therefore in need of redefining peace and harmony towards the future. Providing theoretical and empirical perspectives that can help us overcome the challenges should be one mission of the field of cross-cultural psychology. On behalf of the entire body of the Organizing and Scientific Committees, I wholeheartedly wish that this Congress should serve as a productive platform for the goal of fulfilling this mission.

I hope that all of the participants can discover and enjoy various forms of dualism in the current status of cross-cultural psychology as well as in the conference site, with contrastive dimensions such as old and new, vibrant and serene, manufacturing and conserving, and the hospitality of “cool Japan” currently promoted throughout the nation, whilst immersed in the summer heat.

Minoru Karasawa (Nagoya University)
Chair, Organizing Committee
The 23rd IACCP International Congress
Welcome to IACCP 2016! This conference is an exciting arena for all scholars and practitioners who are interested in the complex relationship between culture, human psychology, and behavior.

The theme of this year’s congress is “honoring traditions and creating the future.” This is a very broad concept, for sure. However, harmony between the old and new is particularly relevant to cross-cultural psychology in two regards.

First, it is crucial that our work speaks to the experience of ordinary people of today. Many of them are living through drastic social change, such as the rapid growth in information technology, global economies, migration, and, sadly, international terrorism. Among such global developments, cross-cultural psychology should be at the fore. It must offer new insight and solutions that help to understand and address the problems of the modern world.

Secondly, there are also waves of the old and new to be found within the cross-cultural psychology discipline. These waves can, at times, crash against each other. However, it is precisely through such collisions – a disharmony of sorts – that new and resurgent theoretical approaches and methodologies are emerging.

Toward these ends, we at the Scientific Committee have done our best to gather together speakers and organize sessions that represent the cutting-edge of current research. Indeed, we were overwhelmed by the unprecedented amount of high quality submissions this year. We hope that, when you open the program book, you will be truly impressed by the range of topics and quality of the presentations featuring over the next few days. Regrettably, there might be some overlap of sessions of your interest and, if so, we are sorry for this. However, we wish that you will agree that having too many sessions of interest is certainly a very luxurious problem!

Finally, I sincerely hope that you all enjoy the congress. I wish that your encounter with new fascinating contents, and establishment of new connections among your colleagues, will help to forge the future of our discipline.

Ed Diener is the Joseph R. Smiley Distinguished Professor of Psychology at the University of Illinois. He received his doctorate at the University of Washington in 1974, and has been a faculty member at the University of Illinois for the past 36 years. Dr. Diener was the president of the International Society of Quality of Life Studies, the Society of Personality and Social Psychology and the International Positive Psychology Association. Diener was the editor of the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, and the editor of Journal of Happiness Studies. He is the founding editor of Perspectives on Psychological Science. Diener has over 300 publications, with about 200 being in the area of the psychology of well-being.

Dr. Diener is a fellow of five professional societies. He is listed as one of the most highly cited psychologists by the Institute of Scientific Information, with over 30,500 citations to his credit. He won the Distinguished Researcher Award from the International Society of Quality of Life Studies, the first Gallup Academic Leadership Award, and the Jack Block Award for Personality Psychology. Dr. Diener has won several teaching awards, including the Oakley-Kundee Award for Undergraduate Teaching at the University of Illinois. With over 50 publications he is the most published author in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology.

Professor Diener’s research focuses on the measurement of well-being; temperament and personality influences on well-being; theories of well-being; income and well-being; and cultural influences on well-being. He has edited three recent books on subjective well-being, and a 2005 book on multi-method measurement in psychology. Diener just published a popular book on happiness with his son Robert Biswas-Diener (Happiness: Unlocking the Mysteries of Psychological Wealth) as well as a book on policy uses of accounts of well-being with Richard Lucas, Ulrich Schimmack, and John F. Helliwell (Well-Being for Public Policy). A multivolume collection of his most influential works in the area of subjective well-being will be published this year (The Collected Works of Ed Diener), as well as a book on international differences in well-being, which he edited in conjunction with Daniel Kahneman and John F. Helliwell (International Differences in Well-Being).

Lecture Title: A Cross-Cultural View of Well-Being

With 12,000 published studies a year related to the science of subjective well-being (SWB), there have been impressive advances in knowledge. The talk will focus on five intriguing topics related to culture and well-being: 1. There are universal predictors of subjective well-being across the world related to the fulfillment of basic human needs. 2. However, there are also culture-specific predictors of SWB. For example, exhibiting the behaviors and characteristics that are valued in one’s cultures – cultural congruence – heightens feelings of SWB. 3. A promising development is the use of societal measures of SWB to inform policy deliberations. For instance, income security programs and green space seem to enhance SWB. 4. One important area of scholarship is the definition and measurement of SWB across cultures, including the valuation of feelings and satisfaction across cultures, as well as understanding response styles that can create differences in scores. 5. A new area of research revolves around the beneficial effects of SWB on later outcomes such as health and longevity, social relationships, citizenship, and work productivity. Because most of the outcome research has been conducted in western individualistic societies that highly value SWB, a critical issue is whether the findings will generalize to other cultural contexts. Although progress has been exciting, there are huge research opportunities in each of these areas for scholars interested in culture.
Peter J. Richerson is Distinguished Professor Emeritus of the Department of Environmental Science and Policy at the University of California, Davis.

Richerson studied entomology at UC Davis, earning his B.S. in 1965. In 1969, he completed his PhD in zoology. After a postdoc and junior professorship he was, from 1977 until 2006, Professor of Environmental Science at UC Davis. He was a guest professor at University of California, Berkeley (1977–78), Duke University (1984), and the University of Exeter (2004). In 1991 he was a guest researcher at the Bielefeld University.

He is coauthor with Robert Boyd of Culture and the Evolutionary Process, and Not By Genes Alone: How Culture Transformed Human Evolution.

Lecture Title: The Evolution of Cultural Differences

Cultural differences arise rather quickly between even semi-isolated groups. In part this is due to the fact that cultural evolution is a comparatively rapid process, but in part it is because of the active symbolic marking of groups. Social identities are important to individuals and they are quick to adopt common dress, dialect, religious practices and so forth that reflect these differences. Symbolic differentiation can occur on quite small scales, such as neighborhoods in a city, occupational groups, and workplace organizations. The ethnolinguistic group is a classic example, but non-trivial groups exist at quite large scales, such as the great religions. Symbolic markers in turn structure social networks and the flow of ideas, allowing non-symbolic differences to grow up between groups. Mathematical models suggest that symbolic marking could have arisen to damp down the flow ideas from group to group. On an ecological gradient, your neighbors may have many practices useful in their environment but maladaptive in yours. Also your neighbors may have social customs that fit poorly with customs in your group. Thus, symbolically marked groups are a little like organic species. However, if foreign ideas or practices are sufficiently attractive they will spread across all but the strongest symbolic boundaries. Cultural differences range from maladaptive to neutral to adaptive and a lot of work is required to tell the difference. Although violent struggles sometimes break out along symbolic boundaries, most boundaries are peaceful most of the time.
Professor Ying-Yi Hong
CUHK Business School at the Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong

Ying-yi Hong is a Professor at the CUHK Business School at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. She received her Ph.D. from Columbia University in 1994 and had taught at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology from 1994 to 2002 before moving to University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign where she taught for eight years. She received the Otto Klineberg Intercultural and International Relations Award in 2001, the Young Investigator Award (conferred by the International Society of Self and Identity) in 2004, and is a Fellow of the Association for Psychological Science.

Her main research interests include culture and cognition, self, identity, and intergroup relations. She is currently the editor of Advances in Culture and Psychology, associate editor of Asian Journal of Social Psychology, and serving on the editorial board of Journal of Personality and Social Psychology. She has published over 100 journal articles and book chapters. Her most recent book entitled “Social Psychology of Culture” was published in 2006 by Psychology Press.

Lecture Title: Do Multicultural Identities Challenge Traditions or Create the Future?

This talk attempts to address the conference theme of “Honoring Traditions and Creating the Future” from the angle of multicultural identities. As the global mobility of individuals and social groups has become the “new normal,” it is urgent to understand how individuals experience contacts with multiple cultures in their daily life. Although multiple cultural exposures have been shown to have beneficial effects (such as enhancing cultural frame switching and creativity), it could also threaten individuals’ own cultural identity. To understand the interplay between these two opposing consequences, I will delineate the concepts of Multicultural Mind and Multicultural Self. Multicultural mind entails acquiring and applying knowledge of new cultures. This process could benefit creativity and innovation. By contrast, multicultural self entails using cultural traditions to define the self, a process that could lead to negative reactions toward new culture if individuals feel that the new culture could erode or contaminate their own culture. I will discuss factors that contribute to positive and negative effects of multiple cultural exposures, and buttress my points using empirical findings from brain, social cognitive and behavioral research. Finally we will explore how the future of mankind depends on mutual respect and active learning between different cultural traditions, and how multicultural identities will play a key role in the process.
Junko Tanaka-Matsumi is a professor in the Department of Integrated Psychological Science at Kwansei Gakuin University, Nishinomiya-City, Japan. She is also professor emeritus of psychology at Hofstra University, Hempstead, New York, where she taught clinical psychology for 20 years until 2000.

Tanaka-Matsumi received her PhD in clinical psychology from the University of Hawaii at Manoa and was an East-West Center (Honolulu) scholarship student. She is a fellow of the American Psychological Association and an associate editor of Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology, and consulting editor for International Perspectives in Psychology: Research, Practice, Consultation, as well as other Japanese journals. She has published on culture and psychopathology, functional analytic approaches to cross-cultural therapy, and school-based cognitive behavioral research and consultation to promote children's classroom adjustment and learning in Japan.

Lecture Title: 100 Years of Research on the Relationship between Culture and Psychology: Emic and Etic Approaches Reappraised

In what ways does culture matter when clinicians work with their clients and patients in clinically-relevant settings across cultures? In this presentation, I trace the dramatic changes in theoretical and empirical approaches to cross-cultural psychopathology and appraise the current state of knowledge on the relationship between culture and psychopathology. Historically, Emil Kraepelin (1904) reported observational accounts from Java of the “very remarkable differences” in forms of psychopathology possibly as a function of then undefined socio-cultural factors. Kraepelin’s bio-medical approach to psychopathology looms large in the successive editions of psychiatric classification, particularly after DSM-III (1980). It took nearly a century to recognize the role of culture in psychiatric diagnosis; DSM-IV (1994) developed an Outline for Cultural Formulation (OCF) for the evaluation of the individual’s cultural background and DSM-5 (2013) developed the OCF Interview. Research shows, however, that patients and clinicians have their own models of mental illness in specific socio-cultural context, a finding of tremendous importance for culturally-informed assessment of psychopathology. Alternative approaches to studies of psychopathology have therefore given priority to developing assessment of the socio-cultural context and its interaction with individuals and groups presenting abnormal behaviors. These views have focused on emic or culture-specific concepts of mental disorders and culturally sanctioned methods of treatment. I compare and contrast major findings of psychopathology research from etic (universal) and emic (culture-specific) perspectives, and try to answer the globally pressing question posed at the beginning of this abstract.
Laurence J. Kirmayer, MD, FRCP, FCAHS, FRSC is James McGill Professor and Director, Division of Social and Transcultural Psychiatry, Department of Psychiatry, McGill University. He is Editor-in-Chief of Transcultural Psychiatry, and Director of the Culture & Mental Health Research Unit at the Institute of Community and Family Psychiatry, Jewish General Hospital in Montreal, where he conducts research on culturally responsive mental health services, the mental health of indigenous peoples, and the anthropology of psychiatry. He founded and directs the annual Summer Program and Advanced Study Institute in Cultural Psychiatry at McGill. His past research includes studies on cultural consultation, pathways and barriers to mental health care for immigrants and refugees, somatization in primary care, and indigenous concepts of mental health and resilience. Current projects include: culturally-based, family-centered mental health promotion for Aboriginal youth; the use of cultural formulation in cultural consultation; and the place of culture in global mental health. He edited the volumes, Understanding Trauma: Integrating Biological, Clinical, and Cultural Perspectives (Cambridge University Press), Healing Traditions: The Mental Health of Aboriginal Peoples in Canada (University of British Columbia Press), Cultural Consultation: Encountering the Other in Mental Health Care (Springer), DSM-5 Handbook for the Cultural Formulation Interview (APPI), and Re-Visioning Psychiatry: Cultural Phenomenology, Critical Neuroscience and Global Mental Health (Cambridge). He is a Fellow of the Canadian Academy of Health Sciences and the Royal Society of Canada. He has received a CIHR senior investigator award, a presidential commendation for dedication in advancing cultural psychiatry from the Canadian Psychiatric Association, as well as both the Creative Scholarship and Lifetime Achievement awards from the Society for the Study of Psychiatry and Culture.

Lecture Title: Embodiment and Enactment in Cultural Psychiatry: From Neurophenomenology to Situated Practice

Cultural psychiatry is concerned with understanding the nature and implications of human cultural diversity for psychopathology, illness experience, and intervention. The emerging paradigms of embodiment and enactment in cognitive science can provide cultural psychiatry with ways to approach this diversity in terms of variations in bodily and intersubjective experience, narrative practices, and discursive formations. While evolutionary history reaches all the way up from brain circuitry to cultural forms of life, culture reaches all the way down to neuroplastic circuitry and epigenetic regulation; hence, human biology is fundamentally cultural biology. This presentation will outline an approach to cultural neurophenomenology and psychopathology through metaphor theory, which brings together the interplay of culturally shaped developmental processes that underlie embodied experience with narrative practices that are structured by ideologies of personhood and social positioning. The new paradigm has broad implications for mental health theory, research and practice, which will be illustrated with examples from the cross-cultural study of mental disorders.
Hazel Rose Markus is the Davis-Brack Professor in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University. Her research focuses on the role of self in regulating behavior and on the ways in which the social world shapes the self. Her work examines how cultures, including those of nation or region of origin, gender, social class, race, ethnicity, religion, and occupation, shape thought, feeling, and action.

Education
Markus received her B.A. from California State University at San Diego and her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan.

Awards
Markus is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She has received the American Psychological Association’s award for Distinguished Scientific Contribution, the Donald T. Campbell award from SPSP for contributions to social psychology, the APS William James Award for lifetime achievement for basic research, and is a member of National Academy of Sciences.

Leadership
Markus is currently director of Stanford’s Research Center for Comparative Studies in Race and Ethnicity (CCSRE) and co-director of Stanford’s center for Social Psychological Answers to Real-world Questions (SPARQ). She is a member of the Successful Societies Advisory Committee, a program of the Canadian Institute For Advanced Research (CIFAR), and is the former President of the Society for Personality and Social Psychology.

Lecture Title: Applying Cultural Psychology: The Significance of Interdependence

Cultural psychology has flourished in the last three decades. Many forms of culture including those of nation and region of origin, race, gender, religion and social class have been analyzed, as well as many aspects of psychological functioning—self, emotion, motivation, cognition, relationships, intergroup conflict, and power. The case for the idea that “culture and psyche make each other up” and for diversity in psychological functioning now rests on a solid foundation of theory and empirical work. Given these advances the time is right for an applicable and communicable cultural psychology that addresses some of our societies’ most pressing problems which often have cultural clashes as their root cause. The analysis of many of these problems still begins with an independent and WEIRD perspective in which behavior is explained in terms of preferences, goals and values of the individual. With examples from education, health and economic development, I will suggest that successful interventions in these domains can benefit from cultural psychology’s findings and insights about interdependence, i.e., behavior that is regulated through relationships and involves being receptive to specific others, realizing expectations and obligations, and following culturally prescribed norms.
Originally from Japan, Shinobu Kitayama received his Ph.D. from the University of Michigan, where he is currently the Robert B. Zajonc Collegiate Professor of Psychology and the Director of the Center for Culture, Mind, and the Brain. He also directs the Culture and Cognition Program.

His research focuses on cultural variations in self, cognition, emotion, and motivation. His article with Hazel Markus on culture and the self, published in Psychological Review (1991), is one of the most widely cited in social and behavioral sciences. Over the last two decades he has used a variety of experimental methods to document a wide array of East-West differences in psychological processes. His more recent work has explored regional, social class, as well as age differences and similarities in psychological tendencies to understand their socio-cultural underpinnings. He has also pioneered the use of neuroscience measures such as functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI) and electroencephalogram (EEG) in the investigation of the dynamic, recursive interaction between culture and the brain, thereby contributing to the emerging field of cultural neuroscience. His most recent work has focused on how certain dopamine-related genes might modulate cultural acquisition.

Before Michigan, he taught at the University of Oregon, Kyoto University, the University of Chicago, and Stanford University. He was a Fellow, twice, at the Center for Advanced Studies in Behavioral Sciences, Stanford, CA (1995-1996, 2007-2008). A recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship in 2010, he has been elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (2012). He served as Editor-in-chief of Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin between 2007 and 2012.

Lecture Title: A Biological Extension of the Heart and Soul of Cultural Psychology

Cultural psychology was rediscovered during the 1980s and 1990s when many of us began to believe that cultural meanings and practices go quite deep “under the skin.” At the same time, we also took it for granted that the psychological processes that are shaped by culture must, in turn, dynamically reconstitute the cultural meanings and practices. Thus, Richard Shweder’s thesis, “culture and the psyche make each other up,” became the heart and soul of the field. It shaped and motivated the field during the 1990s, and our paper, “Culture and the Self,” provided some impetus to the research effort back then. It is only recently, however, that the field began directly addressing its original premise by adopting various biological measures (e.g., neuroimaging and assessment of biomarker). This biological extension of cultural psychology has made it possible to examine, both literally and on-line, how deep culture might go under the skin. Moreover, by empirically linking various biological indices to socio-cultural variables such as cultural norms, beliefs, and practices, the field has begun to address the mutual constitution between culture and the psyche in an expanded theoretical context that encompasses both eco-geographical history and human evolution. This effort has the potential of bringing culture into neuroscience, medicine, genetics, and other traditionally biological fields as an active element of relevant neurophysiological, genetic, and epigenetic pathways.
Toshio Yamagishi received his bachelor’s and master’s degrees from Hitotsubashi University in sociology, and his doctoral degree in sociology from the University of Washington in 1981. Soon after, he started his teaching career at Hokkaido University, then moved to the University of Washington in 1985, and back in Japan at Hokkaido University in 1988. During the quarter of a century following his return to Hokkaido University, he received the Center of Excellence Grant twice, in 2002 and 2007, and established the Center for Experimental Research in Social Sciences in 2007 and became Inaugural Director. After retirement in 2012 from Hokkaido University, he moved to the Brain Science Institute at Tamagawa University, then to the Center for Research in Evolutionary Cognitive Sciences at the University of Tokyo, and finally to the current position at Hitotsubashi ICS. After returning to Hokkaido University, he spent a few months at a time at various places and capacities including Fellow at Zentrum fuer Umfragen, Methoden und Analysen (1990), Rio Tinto/La Trobe University Distinguished Visiting Fellow (1999), Fulbright Fellow (2000), Distinguished Fellow at the Institute of Advances Study, La Trobe University (2001), Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences (2002), and Distinguished Fellow at the Sage Center for the Study of Mind, University of California Santa Barbara. He received the national honor of Medal with Purple Ribbon in 2004 and Person of Cultural Merits in 2013.

Lecture Title: Taming Parochial Prosociality at the Time of Increasing Global Interdependence

Evolutionary theorists struggling with the puzzle of large-scale human cooperation generally agree that human prosociality is parochial, and the social mechanism (or social niche) to support parochial prosociality is small groups consisting of strong-ties in which negative reputational consequences of norm-abiding/violating behaviors yield a strong disciplinary power. However, the cost of maintaining the parochial social order in the form of opportunity cost is increasing in many corners of the world, and the social order provided by the rule of law is replacing parochial production of social order. Rule of law frees people from the need to depend for protection on strong-tie network, and allows individuals to seek better opportunities on their own initiative and at their own risk outside the parochial world. The resulting “individualistic” behavioral principles are often incompatible with parochial values and norms of prosociality (and their neuro-psychological foundations), as seen in the current controversy between communitarian and libertarian ethics in the West or conflicts between traditional community values and “immoral” “Western” values in non-Western societies. Bridging the cultural individualism/independence-collectivism/interdependence literature with the intuitive-deliberative prosociality literature, I believe, will provide a first step toward addressing the issue that the next generation of social scientists face in the coming world – the issue of how we take advantage of our evolved neuro-psychological endowment for parochial prosociality in designing social institutions (or, “culture”) that make us live without hating and destroying each other.
Sylvia Xiaohua Chen is a Professor in the Department of Applied Social Sciences at the Hong Kong Polytechnic University. She received her Ph.D. in psychology from the Chinese University of Hong Kong and M.A. in counseling psychology from Santa Clara University, U.S.A.

Her research focuses on the social psychology of bilingualism and biculturalism, globalization and multiculturalism, personality and social behavior in cultural contexts, and cultural diversity and mental health. To this end, Sylvia has published over 50 journal articles and book chapters. She was a recipient of the Michael Harris Bond Award for Early Career Research Contributions in 2013 and the Jung-heun Park Young Scholar Award in 2005, conferred by the Asian Association of Social Psychology. She also received several academic awards from the American Psychological Association Division 52 (International Psychology), Gallup Positive Psychology Institute, Hong Kong Psychological Society, and Hong Kong Association of University Women during 2004-2007.

Currently, she serves as an associate editor of Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology and Asian Journal of Social Psychology.

Lecture Title: Psychological Responses to Cultural Globalization: Bicultural Identities, Acculturation and Beyond

With the advent of globalization, cultures become increasingly connected through communication, transportation, and trade. The growth of information technology, the speed of geographic mobility, and the expansion of international corporations expose many people to two or more cultures and facilitate intercultural contacts. Globalization has not only brought change to cultural dynamics, but also influenced the psychological processes of individuals being acculturated to norms, values, and practices of other cultures. Research has differentiated immigration-based versus globalization-based acculturation and shown patterns of cultural identification arising from these two types of acculturation experiences. Global Orientations reflect individuals’ feelings, thoughts, and behaviors in the process of multicultural exposure and contact, comprising Multicultural Acquisition as a proactive response and Ethnic Protection as a defensive response to cultural globalization. I will present a series of studies examining the antecedents and consequences of global orientations among majority and minority groups in multicultural societies and relatively monocultural contexts.
Dr. Jia He
Tilburg University, The Netherlands

Jia He is a Humboldt post-doctoral researcher in the German Institute for International Educational Research (DIPF) in Germany and a Thomas J. Alexander fellow in the Organization for Economic-Cooperation and Development (OECD). Her fellowship projects involve the extent of data incomparability in international surveys, and on solutions to overcome or pre-empt the effects of data incomparability. She obtained her Ph.D. (cum laude) in cross-cultural psychology in Tilburg University, the Netherlands. She obtained her M.A. degree in Intercultural Communication from Shanghai International Studies University, China. Her current research includes comparability and validity with innovative designs of item formats and sophisticated psychometric methods in cross-cultural research. She is also interested in modern research methods such as structural equation modeling, multilevel analysis, and Bayesian statistics.

Lecture Title: The General Response Style from a Cross-Cultural Perspective

Response styles have been studied since the 1950s, yet its psychological meaning and implications on validity of data are still under debate. Challenges in research on response styles such as the different operationalizations, lack of validity measures not susceptible to response styles, and inconsistency in their correction effects. My dissertation addresses these challenges by (1) integrating different response styles to a general factor; (2) establishing the nomological network of response styles with validity measures at both individual and cultural level, and (3) exploring the implications of response style effects in cross-cultural surveys. The main findings include that a general response style representing response moderation to amplification is confirmed; response styles represent valid individual and cultural differences; and their correction do not seem to change cross-cultural differences substantially. Implications are discussed.
GETTING TO THE VENUE

July 30: Nagoya University Campus
Pre-Congress Workshops and Welcome Reception

On Saturday, July 30, 2016, Nagoya University will be the host of the pre-congress workshops and welcome reception for IACCP2016. Workshops will be held in the Department of Education on the western side of the school.

Nagoya University is located about 30 minutes from Nagoya Station on the subway line or about 25 minutes by taxi (depending on traffic).

Access: From Nagoya Station take the Higashiyama Subway Line to Motoyama. At Motoyama transfer to the Meijo Subway Line (clockwise). Get off at Nagoya Daigaku subway station (Nagoya University), Exit 1. It costs 270 Yen.

There will be student volunteers between Nagoya Daigaku subway station and the venue on Saturday from 12:00-13:30 and 16:00-18:30 to guide to you the proper location.

If volunteers are not available, please follow these directions:

At Exit 1, turn to your right and walk up the courtyard about 200 meters. On your left you will pass two buildings, the first building is the School of Economics, the second building is the School of Letters. Walk past the 2nd building and turn left at the road. Follow this road for about 150 meters, you will pass a Family Mart on your left about half-way and come to a T-intersection. Turn left here, the Department of Education is about 40 meters down on the left-hand side.
Sunday, July 31 to Wednesday, August 3: WINC Aichi Conference Center
The 23rd Congress of the International Association for Cross-Cultural Psychology

Address: Mei-eki 4-4-38, Nakamura Ward, Nagoya 450-0002, Aichi
Phone number: +81 52-571-6131

Situated in the heart of downtown Nagoya, WINC Aichi provides easy access to food, shopping, city nightlife, as well as transportation to other areas of Nagoya and Japan. Nagoya station is a five-minute walk from the center and boasts access to Japan’s bullet train and other local lines connecting you to the rest of mainland Japan. Nagoya Station is easily recognized by its iconic rounded towers that look out over the city. It is also the central station for many of Nagoya’s trains, subways and bus lines. From Nagoya station, the congress venue, WINC Aichi, is a short five-minute walk away.

Access from Nagoya Station
From the Higashiyama subway line come out of exit 8 ...
From the Sakuradori subway line come out of exit 11 ...
From the Meitetsu or Kintetsu lines come out of exit 12 ...
From JR Lines and the Shinkansen (Bullet Train) find the Golden Clock on the eastern side of Nagoya Station (the opposite side from the Shinkansen exit). Exit the station through the glass doors ...

... then from your exit follow the sidewalk to the right of the taxi pick-up zone and head to the cross-walk on the corner. Across the street is a large Prada store. Walk past the store, keeping it on your left-hand side. Continue straight for about 100 meters. You will come to a small intersection. On the left-hand side will be “BIG ECHO”. Keep going straight. The main entrance to WINC Aichi is just past BIG ECHO on the right-hand side.

Congress Welcome Reception
Saturday, July 30, Nagoya University Campus
The welcome reception will be held at the Nagoya University campus on Saturday, July 30 (18:00-20:00). There will be drinks and light refreshments available. Nagoya University campus is located on the subway network approximately 30 minutes from central Nagoya.

Taiko Drum Performance
Sunday, July 31, WINC Aichi
Nagoya University is proud to have the Folk Dance and Music Club 「民族舞踊団音舞」 amongst their student organizations. The group will perform a traditional Japanese taiko drum and dance performance during a special evening performance on Sunday, July 31 at WINC Aichi.

The club currently consists of 62 members, and has been demonstrating traditional folk dance and music to our community for 43 years. In consistency with the conference theme, “Honoring tradition and creating the future,” we are blessed to have this amazing group of youngsters honoring our tradition, whilst promising us a bright future!

IACCP General Assembly Meeting
This will be held on Monday in the Great Hall (17:30-19:00)

Congress Dinner
Tuesday, August 2, Yanagibashi Beer Garden
The Congress Dinner will be held on the evening of Tuesday, August 2 at the roof-top Yanagibashi Beer Garden, located near the Winc Aichi congress venue.

The dinner includes a set base menu, a buffet, and unlimited drinks (beer, soft drinks, etc). There are also optional extras available that you can buy.

There are two sittings; 17:30-19:30 and 20:00-22:00
The Congress Dinner is included in the registration fee, however pre-registration is required.

A Japanese Cultural Experience: Yagoto Koshoji Tour
This special cultural tour will visit Koshoji Temple in Nagoya’s historic Yagoto area. The Shingon Buddhist temple was established in 1686 by Mitsutomo Tokugawa and is famous for its historic five-story wooden pagoda. Tour guests will be able to experience a traditional tea ceremony and zazen meditation.

This is a volunteer-led walking tour and includes subway transportation fee.
Pre-registration is required for this tour. The 2,500 Yen fee covers admission and transportation fee

Awards

The Witkin-Okonji Memorial Fund Award
The Witkin-Okonji Memorial Fund Award honours the memory of Herman Witkin and Michael Ogbulu Okonji, early pioneers in the field of collaborative cross-cultural research. The purpose of the fund is to provide financial awards to IACCP members to facilitate their attendance at international congresses, with particular concern for members from countries or areas of the world that would otherwise not be represented at a particular congress of the Association.

Harry and Pola Triandis Doctoral Thesis Award Winner
The purpose of the International Association for Cross-Cultural Psychology is to promote and facilitate research in the areas of culture and psychology. The IACCP believes that it is important to encourage high quality intercultural research at the predoctoral level. The Harry and Pola Triandis Doctoral Thesis Award is intended to honor and reward good research and to advance the early careers of dedicated researchers. Support for the award is provided by the Harry and Pola Triandis Fund that was established in 1997 (see Bulletin, June, 1997).
This year’s winner is Dr. Tia He from Tilburg University, the Netherlands.

IACCP Early Career Award Winner
Early career researchers’ contributions are critical for the health and growth of cross-cultural psychology. Their research inspires not only more established researchers, but also sets a standard of excellence and provides examples for aspiring researchers. An Award for Early Career Contributions to Cross-Cultural Psychology has been established to honor researchers at an early stage of their careers for their outstanding contributions to knowledge generation, dissemination, and application for cross-cultural psychology primarily through research, but also through teaching of cross-cultural psychology and service to the field given the available opportunities.
This year’s winner is Sylvia X. Chen from the Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong.

Pre-Congress Workshops
Pre-congress workshops will be held on Saturday, July 30, 13:00-17:30 (half day) at the Graduate School of Education and Human Development on Nagoya University Campus.
The pre-congress workshops are not included in the congress registration fees and pre-reservation is required.

What to Wear and Bring
Summer in Nagoya can be very hot and humid during the day with little cool off at night. It is recommended that delegates wear appropriate clothing while outside and bring a light jacket or sweater when indoors as rooms are air-conditioned and temperatures can difficult to control.

Registration and Information
On checking in at the Registration and Information Desk, you will receive a congress package, including your name badge. You must wear your badge at all times during the congress. If you are not wearing your badge you may be asked to show your identification.

There are three colours of badges indicating the type of congress participant:
- Red: Presenters
- Blue: Audience
- Yellow: Keynote and Featured, and Invited Speakers
- Black: Staff

The Registration and Information Desk will be open at the following times and locations:
- Saturday – 16:00-18:00 (Nagoya University Campus)
- Sunday – 08:00-17:00 (WINC Aichi 2F)
- Monday – 08:00-17:00 (WINC Aichi 2F)
- Tuesday – 08:00-17:00 (WINC Aichi 2F)
- Wednesday – 08:00-16:00 (WINC Aichi 2F)

Lunch and Refreshments
Complimentary coffee, tea, water and light snacks will be served at coffee breaks throughout the day.

- Lunch bentos will be served on the 11th floor in selected rooms at the following times:
  - Sunday – 11:00-14:00
  - Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday – 11:00-13:30

Presentations and Equipment
All rooms will be equipped with a laptop computer pre-installed with PowerPoint and Keynote, as well as a screen and an LCD projector. If you wish, you may directly link your own PC laptop, although we advise you to use the computer provided.

We recommend that you bring your presentation with you on a USB Flash Drive. As back-up we suggest sending yourself the presentation by email.

Session Chairs
Session Chairs are expected to briefly introduce themselves and other speakers, hand out presentation certificates at the end of the session, ensure that the session begins and ends on time, and that the time is divided fairly between the presentations.

In paper and rapid paper sessions a volunteer will be assiged to the room to assist the appointed session chair with timekeeping. In Symposium sessions the chair performs the timekeeping role. Any remaining time at the end of a paper or rapid paper session can be used for Q&A; this is led by the session chair. Poster sessions have no assigned session chairs.

Please follow the order in the programme, and if for any reason a presenter fails to arrive, please keep to the original timeslots, as delegates use the programme to plan their attendance.

A Polite Request to All Participants
Participants are requested to arrive in a timely fashion for all addresses, whether to their own, or to those of other presenters. Presenters are reminded that the time slots should be divided fairly and equally between the number of presentations, and that they should not overrun. We recommend that the 20-minute presentation time slot be divided as follows: 15 minutes for the paper and five minutes for Q&A. Please refrain from talking during sessions and please turn off your mobile phone or set it to silent.
Rapid Paper Presentations
Rapid Paper presentations are scheduled as part of a panel of eight presentations lasting 90 minutes in total. Each presenter has a maximum of 10 minutes. Any time remaining at the end of the 90-minute session can be used for Q&A and discussion.

Tuesday Poster Sessions
Poster Session 1: 09:00-10:30 (Exhibition Hall 7F)
Poster Session 2: 12:00-13:30 (Exhibition Hall 7F)
Poster Session 3: 13:50-15:20 (Exhibition Hall 7F)
Poster Session 4: 15:40-17:10 (Exhibition Hall 7F)

Poster sessions last 90 minutes. Each board will have pushpins and adhesive tape available for presenters to secure their poster.

Poster Preparations
It is recommended that poster presenters use thin, lightweight poster paper. The poster boards will be approximately 1,800mm high by 900mm wide, so any of the following sizes will work well.
- A1 size (841mm high × 594mm wide)
- B1 size (1,030mm high × 728mm wide)
- A0 size (1,189mm high × 841mm wide)

IACCP2016 Congress eBook: Call for Papers
Following longstanding IACCP tradition, the IACCP will publish a Congress eBook based on the presentations given at IACCP 2016. This eBook is peer-reviewed and is not a conference proceedings volume.

To see previous congress eBooks, please check the IACCP website. We strongly encourage you to submit your research. Because this is an “e-” book, the IACCP will publish as many high quality chapters as they receive. Their online books are easily findable through search engines and offer a high level of visibility to authors.

The submission deadline and detailed information will be announced later.

Notes on Submission
- Submitters must be members of IACCP and must have presented the submitted paper at the IACCP2016 Congress in Nagoya, Japan.
- The manuscripts must represent previously unpublished work. The length should be around 10-12 pages, approximately 3,000 words, double-spaced, and typewritten in English with a 250-word abstract.
- Manuscripts should be prepared according to the most recent edition of the APA manual, and follow the submission requirements that will be provided specifically for the eBook.
- The submission period will be approximately two months following the IACCP2016 Congress.

Event Manager Information and Contact Details
The International Academic Forum (IAFOR), a Japan-based academic event organizer and publisher, is the event manager for IACCP 2016. For more information about IAFOR, its conferences and its publications, please visit www.iafor.org.
Address: Sakae 1-16-26 – 201, Naka Ward, Nagoya, Aichi, Japan 460-0008
Abstracts Online

There are 2 ways to access abstract information for a presentation:

1) IAFOR Events app
The IAFOR Events app includes presentation names, author information and the full abstract.
The IAFOR Events app doesn’t require an internet connection of any kind after it’s been downloaded to your device.
You can download the app from the Apple App store or Google Play store by searching for “IAFOR Events”.

How to use the app
Searching
To find a specific abstract you can use the search bar at the top. A search will show results by looking through titles, author names and streams.

Sorting
To get a better overview, you can sort the list of abstracts alphabetically by the abstract title, author or streams.
To sort, simply press on “Sort by” under the search bar and press on the desired sorting method.
You can also see abstracts of a specific abstract by pressing on “Stream” and then press on the desired stream.

Add to favorites
If you want to mark an abstract so that you can easily find it later: Simply press on “Add to favorites”.
If you want to remove an abstract as a favorite, press on the “remove from favorites” which is located at the same spot
as the “Add to favorites

Reading the abstract
To read more about a specific abstract, press on the abstract and a popup will show more information.
Press on “Go back” at the top up of the screen to go back to the list of abstracts.
You can find your favorite abstracts by pressing “favorites” at the top of the app. You can go back and see all abstracts again by pressing “All” at the top.

2) IACC2016 Abstract Search
Visit the URL abstracts.iaccp2016.com

Use our online search tool to:
Read for all presentation abstracts
Share abstracts on social media
Save abstracts as favorites to read later

Read a specific abstract if you know its submission number
For example – http://abstracts.iaccp2016.com/submission99999/

Use the “Save as a favorite” button to add the abstract to “My Favorites list” for later reference

TAIKO (JAPANESE DRUMS) & DANCE
Presented by Nagoya University Folk Dance & Music Club

Nagoya University is proud to have the Folk Dance and Music Club "民舞団音舞" amongst their student organizations. The group will perform a traditional Japanese taiko drum and dance performance during a special Evening Cultural Performance on Sunday, July 31 at WINC Aichi. The club currently consists of 62 members, and has been demonstrating traditional folk dance and music to our community for 43 years. In consistency with the conference theme, "Honoring tradition and creating the future," we are blessed to have this amazing group of youngsters honoring our tradition, whilst promising us a bright future!

Nagoya Castle, a symbol of Nagoya, was the residence of the Owari Tokugawa household. It was built by the order of Ieyasu Tokugawa in 1612, and it symbolizes Nagoya's pride and power. There are exhibits describing the lifestyle of the local lords in the castle tower (main donjon). The Hommaru Palace, registered as a National Treasure, was tragically burnt down during World War II.

Restoration of the palace is currently underway. The City of Nagoya started the restoration project in 2010 and it is scheduled to be completed in 2018. The first stage was completed in May, 2013 and the second stage, including Taimenjo (the reception hall) and Shimogozensho (the serving preparation room), was completed and opened to the public in June, 2016.

About IACCP

The Association facilitates communication among persons interested in all areas of the intersection of culture and psychology by organizing conferences, providing online resources, publishing a highly regarded journal, sponsoring several research awards, supporting international travel, and organizing educational opportunities for postgraduate students.

Harry Triandis
(1967) 3rd IACCP President

History

The IACCP was founded in 1972 following a decade of cultural ferment in world psychology and the appearance of two critical publications, Harry Triandis’ Cross-Cultural Social Psychology Newsletter (1967) and Walt Lonner’s Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology (1970). The first IACCP Congress was hosted in Hong Kong by John Dawson, who served as the first IACCP president.

Jerome Bruner
(Hong Kong, 1972)

Publications & Communication

IACCP is associated with the Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology, the open access resource Online Readings in Psychology and Culture, conference eBooks, a discussion list, and a searchable member directory.

ORPC publishes concise reviews, essays, and summaries across the subfields of cross-cultural psychology, including most core research specialties, that reflect current trends and discussions in cross-cultural psychology and related fields.

iaccp.org is the primary website of the Association, providing organizational news, conference information, resources for IACCP activities and an archive of teaching resources. The site publicizes member news such as new books, personal awards, and research projects.

Conferences

IACCP holds international congresses every two years and regional conferences in most other years. Congresses are held shortly before or after the conferences of the IUPsyS and the IAAP, in nearby locations.

The 2017 Regional Conference will be in Warsaw, Poland and the 2018 Congress will be in Guelph, Ontario, Canada. See iaccp.org for conference news and updates.

Culture & Psychology School

We offer an advanced educational opportunity for PhD and Masters students in association with our biennial conferences. The school’s goal is to provide specialized training by experts in topics of importance and relevance for studying psychology and culture in context. The programme is designed to facilitate cross-cultural contact and understanding among future academic leaders and to broaden their academic vision.

Membership

IACCP has a membership of over 700 persons in more than 70 countries. Membership fees are based on annual income. To join, complete the membership form on our website, www.iaccp.org
